Mission and Purpose

The Maine Gerontological Society (MGS) is a statewide association of individuals and organizations interested in issues that affect older adults in the state of Maine. The Society has the charge of serving as the leading interdisciplinary association on aging in the state focusing on aging education, practice and research in policy perspective.

The Society is dedicated to giving equal voice to the diverse aging-related interests of the academic, practice and general communities and promoting active participation by administrators and planners, policymakers, practitioners, educators, researchers, business people, students, older adults, and others.

Programs of the MGS emphasize the offering of education and training opportunities for those who want to be well informed and play an active role in shaping aging policy and services in Maine in the years to come.

“The fact that Maine is the oldest state in the nation in terms of the age of its citizenry insures that the Society will continue to have a crucial role to play in the years ahead.”

Annual Maine Geriatric Conference The MGS co-sponsors the Annual Maine Geriatric Conference which brings together professionals, students, older adults, and others with a shared interest in and commitment to education, practice, research, and policy impacting Maine’s older citizens.

Discounted Education Opportunities The Society regularly co-sponsors a range of educational conferences, colloquia, and workshops on specialized topics in aging for which members receive substantial registration discounts.

Maine Aging News & Information Update The Society publishes a newsletter which is also posted to the MGS website that provides Society, state, and national aging-related news of interest to our membership.

Hot Topics Regular quick announcements of new gerontological and geriatric resources, reports, programs, and other information of interest to MGS members.
